Native American Voter Information

Electoral History

In 1978, the Office of the Secretary of State in New Mexico established an avenue to assist Native Americans in the electoral process. Native American interpreters were hired to interpret state election documents in various New Mexico tribal language dialects. These interpreters also informed tribal members about voter information and candidate requirements needed during an election.

During 1988, the Department of Justice took legal action in New Mexico to extend greater election information to Native Americans based on the minority language assistance amendments to the Federal Voting Rights Act of 1965. As a result of these actions, the Native American Election Information Program (NAEIP) was established in the Office of the Secretary of State, within the Bureau of Elections, to assist in developing voter education projects for eleven New Mexico counties with substantial Native American populations: Bernalillo, Cibola, McKinley, Otero, Rio Arriba, Sandoval, San Juan, Santa Fe, Socorro, Taos, and Valencia.

Over the years, the NAEIP has served New Mexico tribes and its tribal members. The program's goals are to provide voter education and to ensure compliance with the minority language assistance amendments of the Federal Voting Rights Act of 1965. To accomplish these goals, the program is designed to communicate with Native American voters on a wide range of information; voter and candidacy requirements, electoral process and participation. The program has representatives from both the Navajo and Pueblo who are responsible for the overall coordination of the oral assistance and voter education programs.
